

Getting started with AI in the Classroom

Transcription: Video 3

Interviewees

Bianca Callegher

Primary and lower secondary educator
Brazil

Hamit Özonur

Maths teacher
Portugal

Farhat Deebea

Science teacher
Pakistan

What are the benefits of AI in the classroom?

Bianca

Whenever we connect the classroom environment to the learning environment and relate it to students' own world, we motivate students. We engage them in the learning process, and we have a lot to gain. There is a lot to benefit from it.

Hamit

I think it is something that is going to help us do our job better and hopefully faster and easier. It's not quite there yet, but I believe that it has the potential.

Bianca

If we think about preparing students for life, we are preparing them to deal with challenges in the real world.

Hamit

I am a secondary school teacher. My focus has always been on teaching secondary students, but, as you know, in schools, we don't always teach what we are most comfortable with. Sometimes we get middle school classes, and sometimes we have to teach students we are not that used to. AI loves us to specify which year group we are teaching and generate content tailored to that level in a very easy and fast way.

Farhat

I have also been the head of department, and in that administrative role, a lot of data has to be recorded. For meetings, for example, you have to present data to the principal and other colleagues. AI can help beautifully present that data rather than just providing numbers.

Hamit

I remember my first and second years of teaching – lesson planning took me so many hours. Even just structuring a lesson would take a lot of time because it typically requires a lot of thinking, writing, and reflecting. AI will help with that.

Farhat

The data recording, portfolio management – a lot of information has to be kept as a careers counsellor. AI could automate this, allowing us to focus on students' challenges and where they are struggling. How can we help them in less time? Achieving more in less time is a desirable goal nowadays.

Bianca

AI can actually help a lot and support both students and teachers in the learning and teaching environment.

Farhat

I feel like it's going to make our lives easier.